DAC Advice for PCCs

When did you last change the information on your church noticeboard? Is it up-to-date?

A church noticeboard is often the first point of contact for visitors. In today's visual age it is important that noticeboards provide a positive image of the church. A noticeboard which looks worn, dated, or which contains incorrect information does not reflect well on the church itself and may either deter visitors or make it difficult for them to contact the incumbent.

1. Location

When a PCC is first considering how to change its noticeboard, location is an important consideration. Boards should be located in the area of greatest footfall which may not be in the traditional location next to the main gate. Instead, the board could be relocated so it is looking out onto the street or at the entrance to the church car park. It's also important to check that the board is not partially hidden by trees or shrubbery.

You are able to erect signage on church land without permission from the local planning authority, provided that the sign is no larger than 1.2m². This should be borne in mind when considering the design of your noticeboard. Further information on permissions can be found under the heading 'Permissions' below.

Some points to note: If the board is to be placed outside church land (e.g. in a Vicarage garden or on land owned by the church but outside the boundary walls), planning permission will be needed for the board, irrespective of the size. If the board is to be relocated to an area where burials may have taken place, an archaeologist may need appointing to oversee any digging into the churchyard to place the posts.

2. Design

The next decision of a PCC is to choose the design of the noticeboard. There are several different layouts for boards; these are the most popular:

The board to the left contains static information about the church services and contacts.

The board above has space for static information, plus space to include posters or advertisements for events and special services. Some boards of this type have only one lockable display cupboard.

This board has the name of the church and diocesan logo with a large space to display interchangeable information regarding services and to advertise for events.

Many modern church noticeboards are made from coloured aluminium with vinyl lettering, mounted on aluminium poles. These are attractive, durable and easy to amend when a new incumbent arrives or services change. Some churches prefer to use wooden noticeboards which are also attractive but will need regular maintenance or repainting to prevent the wood from rotting. Please ensure that a regular maintenance routine is established for repainting or re-varnishing external wooden boards to prevent wear and tear from the elements.

The colour of your board is another factor to consider. The diocese does not have a set colour for noticeboards so you may wish to use your preferred church colour instead. Be wary of using a colour that is too dark with dark lettering as this will be difficult to read from a distance. It is also worth considering a fairly conservative colour scheme; boards with clashing colours may catch the eye, but not necessarily for a good reason. It is better to have one block colour for your board and another colour for your lettering. There is increased recognition that some people find it easier to read dark colours on a light background and this could be a consideration when designing your board.

3. Wording

When choosing the wording for the board it is better to keep text to a minimum and only include important information that will not change over time.

Information that must be included on the board:

- The Diocesan logo
- The name of the church

(The Diocesan logo is available on the Diocesan website: here. It can be downloaded as several different file types as different sign manufacturers will have different requirements. The logos on the website are provided in the preferred colours, but consideration may be given to variations to this, if it benefits the overall appearance of your noticeboard.)

Information that should be included on the board, either as the main wording or on display in one of the cabinets:

- Regular service times and details
- Contact details for the incumbent and any church office
- The website address for the church – which may contain any transient contact details such as those for a curate.

Information that could also be included:

- Contact for hall or room bookings
- Church logo

Consideration of the font type and size is important to make your board readable. The British Dyslexia Association recommend using a plain, evenly spaced sans serif font such as Arial, Verdana, Tahoma and Trebuchet. These fonts are clear and easy to read even at a distance, unlike flowery script-like fonts. Avoid using all capital letters as this can be difficult to read when used for a block of information.

Another important factor is to ensure that your wording is grammatically accurate with no spelling errors. Avoid repetition: For example if there is a heading called 'Sunday Services' then it is not necessary to list the service as '10.00 Sunday Holy Communion' or 'Main Sunday Family Communion'. For an idea of how to arrange the information on your board and some of the grammatical pitfalls, please see the example mock up at the end of the advice document.

4. Permissions

If you need to repair your external noticeboard or wish to repaint it or change the lettering to add the name of a new incumbent or church service, this can be done under List A of Schedule 1 to the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 2015 and does not require consultation or any form of prior approval.

A new or replacement noticeboard within the boundary of the churchyard would usually require Faculty permission. However, the Chancellor is willing to consider authorising Dispensations from Faculty on a case by case basis. This authorisation removes the requirement for consulting the DAC and has the effect of bringing the proposal within List A pursuant to an Additional Matters Order issued by the Chancellor. To apply for a Dispensation from Faculty please contact the Registry providing the following documents:

- A covering letter addressed to the Chancellor stating why you wish to apply for a Dispensation from Faculty;
- A letter of support from your Archdeacon – in particular your Archdeacon will need to agree to the design and wording on the board;
- A PCC Minute resolving to seek a Dispensation from Faculty for the proposed board;
- A mock-up of the board showing the exact dimensions, colour, wording and design;
- Photographs of the existing board and the location of the new board;
- If the board is to be affixed to the church building or churchyard wall, the Inspecting Architect will need consulting on fixings. His or her comments will form part of the paperwork. If the board is freestanding on posts, the comments of your Inspecting Architect are not necessary;
- If new posts are to be sited in a new area where burials may have occurred, an archaeological Written Scheme of Investigation is needed;
- Notification of any advertising planning consent (see below).

If your noticeboard is larger than 1.2m², you will need to obtain Advertising Consent from your local planning authority. There is usually a cost associated with making such an application. The process for obtaining consent will vary between different local authorities, so you will need to contact the planning department to establish what the requirements are for your area.

As with all matters to do with church fabric, the DAC officers are available to talk through any issues regarding a new noticeboard. Please contact us at the following:
